WILL RUN ONE BIG EXCURSION

Only One Negro Excursion from Baltimore to Gettysburg will be run this year but it will bring between Four and Five Thousand.

As the result of numerous protests and considerable dissatisfaction which followed the various colored excursions run by the Western Maryland from Baltimore to Gettysburg last summer the officials of that road decided to discontinue all such trains this year.

It will be recalled that last season a number of the excursions brought a decidedly disreputable assortment of colored citizens who made considerable trouble in the town and were not only objectionable to the people of the town but also to the Western Maryland, the coaches suffering severely in some instances from the treatment accorded by the excursionists.

As a general move for the better the Western Maryland practically decided to discontinue the practice of sending weekly consignments of colored Baltimoreans who would get drunk and disorderly upon their arrival here and cause no little disturbance.

This morning F. M. Howell, general passenger agent of the road, was in town with reference to running just one big negro excursion to Gettysburg this fall and, after interviewing a number of people and having some time ago asked local business men for their views on the matter, announced that the annual colored Grand Army excursion from Baltimore would be run on September 9. While this usually brings from 4000 to 5000 people the crowd is more orderly than the smaller outings run by the colored clubs which in every instance have been refused this summer. There was practically no objection to the running of this one big excursion and Mr. Howell gave the local people assurance that every effort would be made in warnings and otherwise to keep the best of order among the people while here.

WANTED RIDE ONLY TO ROB

Halbert Poole, well known Horse Dealer, Has Unpleasant Experience but Comes out Victor. Authorities after Men.

Attempted robbery in return for a ride, was the reward Halbert Poole, a horse dealer, of Taneytown, well known in this county, received Tuesday night. His assailants were two men who had begged a ride in his carriage. The Carroll county authorities have full descriptions of the highwaymen.

Poole, who usually carries a large sum of money for use in his business, was returning home from Kee Mar and the men were picked up four miles from Taneytown. They sat on the rear seat. After driving a mile, Mr. Poole was startled to hear a voice asking, "How much change have you?" Looking back he faced a pistol in the hand of one of the men.

He quickly knocked the revolver out of the man's hand and grappled with him. The horses continued trotting down the road and approached several houses in which lights were burning. Here the strangers leaped from the carriage and disappeared in the woods. Mr. Poole drove to the Grange Fair, Ober's Grove, and notified Deputy Sheriff Buchanan and Constable Miller.

ANNUAL SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING

County Sunday School Association will hold its Annual Convention in Bendersville the latter part of this month.

The annual convention of the Adams County Sunday School Association will be held on Thursday and Friday, August 29 and 30 in Bethlehem Lutheran church, Bendersville. An attractive program has been arranged and a large attendance is expected.

Interest in the county association has been especially keen recently and for the last two years the county has been in the "Front Line" position, the standard set by the state association as the goal toward which all individual schools and county associations should strive. It is expected that the reports at the coming convention and the work done there will keep Adams County in this same desirable place.

Among the speakers who have been secured for this year's convention are W. D. Reel, of Philadelphia; Rev. Charles A. Oliver, of York; District Superintendent A. B. Pasick, D. D., of Carlisle, and it is hoped to have Rev. H. B. King, of Harrisburg, for one or more addresses. Mr. Reel is one of the state workers assigned to this section and is well known in Gettysburg and throughout the county. Dr. Pasick is well known in the upper end of the county and the other men are also speakers of note. Addresses will also be made by a number of Adams County people.

The music of the convention will be in charge of L. L. Taylor, of Gettysburg, whose success in this line is well known. It will be recalled that the music at the convention in Gettysburg last year was one of the features and the church was crowded at almost every session for the addresses and the music led by the Chautauque Chorus.

A large attendance is expected at the Bendersville convention. There will be the usual number of delegates from all sections of the county and the people in general from the upper end of the county may be expected to attend the various sessions.

APPROPRIATION BILL VETOED

President Disapproves of the Measure a Second Time.

FAILS TO RE-PASS IN HOUSE

Taft Gives As His Reasons For Veto Abolishing of Commerce Court and Seven-Year Tenure of Civil Service Employees — Budget Extended to Sept. 1.

Washington, Aug. 12.—The house, by a vote of 153 to 107, refused to pass the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill over President Taft's veto.

Majority Leader Underwood was unable to hold his followers and many voted with the Republicans.

Last year's appropriations for the conduct of government were extended, this time to Sept. 1, by a resolution which passed the house and went to the senate. A former extension resolution has expired.

This will enable the government to pay the army, navy and other establishments which have long been without money.

President Taft vetoed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill because of its amendments to abolish the United States commerce court and limit the tenure of office of civil service employees to seven years. The cabinet read and approved the president's message, and later it was transmitted to congress.

Mr. Taft's message was strong in its condemnation of the way congress had attached special legislation to an annual appropriation bill. The president wrote that he approved any system of promoting efficiency in the civil service, but he could not approve any legislation to turn out of office employees who had given their best years to the government.

The president defended the commerce court vigorously, and wrote that opposition to it came from those who had not been in sympathy with its passage. The president wrote, in part:

"When it is thought wise by congress to include in general supply bills important substantive legislation, and the executive cannot approve such legislation, it is his constitutional duty to return the bill with his objections, and the responsibility for delay in the appropriation of the necessary expenses to run the government cannot rest upon the executive, but must be put where it belongs, upon the majority in each house of congress that has departed from the ordinary course and united with an appropriation bill amendments to substantive law."

"The importance and absolute necessity of furnishing funds to maintain and operate the government cannot be used by the congress to force upon the executive acquiescence in permanent legislation which he cannot conscientiously approve."

"I am utterly opposed to the abolition of a court because its decisions may not always meet the approval of a majority of the legislature. It is introducing a recall of the judiciary, which, in its way, is quite as objectionable as the ordinary popular method proposed."

When the reading of the veto was over Representative Stephen, of Nebraska, Democrat, introduced a resolution for the passage of any vetoed measure by a majority vote. A two-thirds vote of both houses is now required.

Mr. Stephen declared Mr. Taft had used the veto power more than it had been used in the first half century of the nation's history. He added that the president of France had no veto power, and that while the king of England enjoyed the privilege he "had not dared to use it" for two hundred and twenty years.

The veto will have the effect of holding up the salary of President Taft, every member of congress, every United States judge, and all employees of the federal courts.

He was elected lieutenant governor on the ticket on which Henry M. Hoyt was elected governor, and served from 1879 to 1883. In 1887 he was appointed secretary of the commonwealth by Governor Beaver and resigned in 1890.

EXHUME HARTMANN BODIES

Police Suspect First Husband of Mrs. Trost Was Murdered.

Philadelphia, Aug. 16.—Acting on information from New York, the coroner gave orders to exhume the bodies of Frederick Hartmann and the two Hartmann children, first husband and stepchildren of Mrs. Freda Hartmann Trost, the Germantown avenue saloon owner, who, with her bartender, Edmund Guenkel, is held on the charge of causing the death of her second husband, Frederick Trost.

The bodies of the Hartmanns, father and children, will be examined, and it is expected that if suspicions of Christian Hartmann, of New York, that his brother died in February, 1911, of poisoning are proved correct, it will furnish additional evidence that Trost was murdered.

Christian Hartmann said that his brother died under mysterious circumstances, similar to those surrounding the death of Trost.

Anticipating that her defense might be insanity, the authorities set two expert alienists to watch Mrs. Trost, and she was closely guarded that she might not obtain any weapon or drug.

Edmund Guenkel, charged with complicity in the alleged poisoning of William Trost, made an unsuccessful attempt to be released on bail through his attorney, Joseph P. Gaffney, who applied to Judge Ralston for a writ of habeas corpus.

The inability of Assistant District Attorney Taulane to argue on the writ compelled Judge Ralston to indefinitely postpone the hearing on the writ. In seeking a continuance of the proceedings, Assistant District Attorney Taulane contended that counsel for Guenkel had not given the commonwealth the usual forty-eight hours' notice in filing the application for the writ.

AMERICANS ARE IN PERIL

Rebels Are Besieging City of Managua, Nicaragua.

MORE MARINES ASKED FOR

General Mena's Big Guns Are Dropping Shells Into the City, Endangering the Hotels of the Capital City—Many Women and Children Killed.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Americans in Managua, capital of Nicaragua, are practically in a state of siege, according to dispatches to the state department from Minister Welbel.

Shells from General Mena's big guns are dropping in the principal hotels of the city, and even the legation is in danger of being razed. American marines are doing their utmost to prevent rebel shots from penetrating the foreign quarter, but as the United States forces cannot go outside the city, they are unable to hamper seriously the fire of the revolutionists.

Minister Welbel also stated that a shell from a rebel gun fell in the dining room of the Hotel Lapone, wounding a number of diners and servants; another dropped in the courtyard of the house occupied by an American named Hamm, a representative of New York banking interests, demolishing the house but injuring no one, and a number of shots struck dangerously near the American legation.

The rebels apparently have no military object in shelling the city, but are evidently doing so with the intention of seeing how much damage they can inflict. Sixteen New Orleans business firms telegraphed the state department, appealing for additional troops to restore order in Nicaragua. Secretary Knox replied that the state department is doing everything in its power, but it did not wish actually to intervene until all other alternatives had been employed.

Insurgents Resume Attack.

Managua, Nicaragua, Aug. 16.—The insurgents under command of General Mena and Zeledon resumed their attack on Managua, but after a desperate fight were again repulsed. This was the fourth day of the battle which is being waged about the Nicaraguan capital. Before they were repulsed the rebels succeeded in forcing their way close up to the houses of the city.

The American sailors, under Lieutenant J. A. Campbell, Jr., of Philadelphia, guarding the United States legation and the presidential palace, had been specifically selected from the American detachment stationed here to protect the lives and property of American citizens, directed a fire too hot for the attackers and the rebels were driven back.

The bombardment of the city by field guns was continued all night. Many women and children were killed. The president's palace was hit twice. Three shells missed striking the American legation by the narrow margin of thirty yards.

All Americans and other foreigners in the city are safe. An attempt was made to assassinate the commander-in-chief of the government forces, General Emilio Chamorro, when he was walking the streets.

TO RESTRICT U. S. FORCES

Bacon Resents Use of Army and Navy in Disturbed Countries.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Senator Bacon continued his attack upon the use of the army and navy for intervention in disordered countries. He offered a bill to restrict the use of these forces.

The measure would make it impossible for the president to order troops into a foreign country when congress is in session without authorization of congress.

"We read," said Mr. Bacon, "that American marines actually engaged in a battle on foreign soil—in a country with which we are at peace. They marched into the interior of that country with hundreds of men and met an armed force in battle. The attitude of some officials seems to be that the army and navy are toys and playthings for them to sport with."

The senator was referring to the use of United States sailors in Nicaragua.

War Hero's Widow Kills Herself.

St. Louis, Aug. 16.—Mrs. Hallie F. Forrest, widow of William F. Forrest, a son of General Nathan F. Forrest, Confederate hero of the Civil War, killed herself in a park here. Notes which she left indicated that she had been in an asylum for the insane. Mrs. Forrest was a member of a socially prominent family in Memphis.

ARMIES LINED UP FOR BIG BATTLE

Red and Blue Forces Are Now Facing Each Other.

TODAY'S FIGHT MAY DECIDE

Defenders and Invaders Have Called In Their Scattered Units to Strengthen Their Lines For the Crucial Test.

Maneuvers Headquarters, Stratford, Conn., Aug. 16.—The general engagement for possession of New York will be fought today, probably in Newtown.

Last night the commanders began shifting their units to better positions. Neither dared go into a general engagement on the strength of their dispositions, which were on parallel lines running north and south, the Reds through Huntington, holding Walnut Tree Hill as the key to their center, and the Blues resting their main body in Stepany, with the left wing at Upper Stepany.

The two armies slept about five miles apart. Pickets were in touch, but did no firing. A few prisoners were taken and sent to the rear. The night's rest was a welcome one to the men on both sides.

The sun found officers poring over their maps. Neither General Smith, of the Reds, nor General Mills, of the Blues, was ready to bring on the expected engagement yesterday. Each wanted a better position. The early deploying showed that each commander was trying to move his units to strategic positions and to mass their numbers. The outposts were aggressive, and cavalry of both colors was scurrying around as if to give the opposing force the impression that an advance was about to be made.

The changes in positions of bridges showed that both armies were working slightly to the north. This would bring the Blues directly east of their Danbury base, with an inclination southwest. They have the interior lines, and this means that General Smith will have to spread out his forces if he has any idea of making the fight on the flanks.

In the headquarters camp all was activity. The signal corps suddenly packed up, and, with the troops of the Tenth cavalry, marched out it, presumably, was going to Newtown to establish a new headquarters for General Bliss, who, as chief umpire, will simply watch the fight today and Saturday, having with him Major General Leonard Wood, chief of the general staff, and other officers. Colonel Urculley Cerejo, of the Spanish embassy, has joined the military attaches. General Wingate, of the New York National Guard, was another officer who arrived for the big event.

The delay in bringing about a general engagement was due, in part, to the failure of many small units to join the larger force. Many small detachments had been scattered over a considerable area, and when the contraction began in earnest these were called in. The heat told on the transports and horses had to be rested frequently.

A more potent reason for delay was that many regiments had only two horses to their field wagons, when they should have had four. When wagons struck the steep grades the horses could not pull them. The four-in-hands of army mules took the hills with a rush, amid the cracking of whips and the cries of teamsters. The horses gave out on the road, and the soldiers had to lend a hand. Even motor trucks got stalled on some hills because of the weight of their loads.

Some regiments had a good deal of superfluous baggage, and there was some delay in breaking camp. Otherwise, observers thought the entire outfit was moving along.

AEROPLANES IN WARFARE

General Huerta to Employ Air Scouts Against Orozco.

Chihuahua, Mexico, Aug. 16.—Aeroplanes will be employed by General Huerta in his campaign against the rebels unless Orozco's forces at Juarez contrive to scatter in small bands, making formal warfare impracticable.

The monoplanes recently purchased by the war department and tested at Torreon have been sent here, and it is probable that they will be sent this week to Gallegos for scouting expeditions.

"Do you know, parson," he said, "seems if I'd seen the fellow somewhere afore. 'Course I never have, but when I used to go whalin' 'yages I cruised from one end of creation to t'other, pretty aigh, and I might have met him."

That night the sick man was much worse. His ravings were incoherent. The wooden clock, loaned by Mrs. Parker, the doctor's wife, ticked steadily, although a half hour slow. Ellery, glancing at it to see if the time had come for giving medicine, suddenly noticed how loud its ticking sounded. Wondering at this, he was aware there was no other sound in the house. He rose and looked in at the door of the adjoining room. The patient had ceased to rave and was lying quiet on the bed.

The minister tiptoed over to look at him. And, as he did so, the man opened his eyes.

"Halloo!" he said faintly. "Who are you?"

Ellery, startled, made no answer.

"Who are you?" demanded the man again. Then, with an oath, he repeated the question, adding: "What place is this? This ain't the fo'castle, where am I?"

"You're ashore. On Cape Cod. At Trumet."

"Trumet! Trumet!"

He was struggling to raise himself on his elbow. Ellery was obliged to use force to hold him down. He struggled again. Then his strength and his reason left him simultaneously and the delirium returned. He began to shout a name, a name that caused Ellery to stand upright and step back from the bed, scarcely believing his ears.

All the rest of that night the man on the bed raved and muttered, and of people and places and happenings which he had not mentioned before. And the minister, listening intently to every word caught himself wondering if he also was not losing his mind.

When the morning came, Ebenezer Capen was awakened by a shake to find John Ellery standing over him.

"Capen," whispered the minister, "Capen, get up. I must talk with you. You used to be a whaler, I know. Were you acquainted in New Bedford?"

"Sartin. Was a time when I could have located every stick in it, pretty aigh, by the smell, if you'd set me down side of 'em blindfolded."

"Did you ever know anyone named—?" He finished the sentence.

"Well, I wanted to. Pretty decent fellow one time, but a fast goer, and went downhill like a young one's sled, when he got started. His folks had money, that was the trouble with him. Why, 'course I knew him. He married—"

"I know. Now, listen."

Ellery went on talking rapidly and with great earnestness. Ebenezer listened, at first silently, then breaking in with ejaculations and grunts of astonishment. He sat up on the edge of the bed.

"Rubbish!" he cried at last. "Why, tain't possible! The fellow's dead as Methusalem's grandmarm. I remember how it happened and—"

"It wasn't true. That much I know, I know, I tell you."

He went on to explain why he knew. Capen's astonishment grew.

"Judas priest!" he exclaimed again. "That would explain why I thought I'd seen— There! leave ahead. I've got to see. But it's a mistake. I don't believe it."

The pair entered the sick room. The sailor lay in a stupor. His breathing was rapid, but faint. Capen bent over him and gently moved the bandage on his face. For a full minute he gazed steadily. Then he stood erect, drew a big red hand across his forehead, and moved slowly back to the living room.

"Yup," he said, "it's him. Mr. Ellery, what are you goin' to do about it?"

"I don't know. I don't know. I must go somewhere by myself and think. I don't know what to do."

The minister declined to wait for breakfast. He said he was not hungry. Leaving Ebenezer to put on the coffee-pot and take up his duties as day nurse, Ellery walked off along the beach. By and by he heard Capen calling his name.

"Mr. Ellery," shouted Ebenezer. "Mr. Ellery, where be you?"

"Here!" replied the minister.

The old man came scrambling over the sand. He was panting and much excited.

"Mr. Ellery!" he cried, "Mr. Ellery! it's settled for us—one part of it, anyhow. He's slipped his cable. Yup. He must have died just a little while after you left and after I gave him his medicine. I thought he looked kind of queer then. And when the doctor came we went in together and he was dead. Yes, sir, dead."

"Dead!"

"Um-hm. No doubt of it; it's for good this time. Mr. Ellery, what shall we do? Shall I tell Dr. Parker?"

Ellery considered for a moment.

"No," he said slowly. "No, Capen, don't tell anyone. I can't see why they need ever know that he hasn't been dead for years, as they supposed. Promise me to keep it a secret. I'll tell—her—myself, later on. Now promise me, I trust you."

"Land sakes, yes! I'll promise, if you want me to."

The next day the body of "Murphy," foremost hand on the San Jose, was buried in the corner of the Regular graveyard, near those who were drowned in the wreck of that winter. Capen remained at the shanty another week. Then, as the minister showed no symptoms of having contracted the disease and insisted that he needed no companion, Ebenezer departed to take up his fishing once more.

Ellery himself was most urgent in the decision that he should not go back to the parsonage and his church just yet. Better to wait until he was sure, he said, and Dr. Parker agreed. Dr. Parker told him of Grace Yan-

Horne's return to the village. She had come back, so the doctor said, the day before, and was to live at the tavern for a while, at least. Yes, he guessed even she had given up hope of Captain Nat now.

"And say," went on Parker, "what I want to know is whether you think I could leave you for a couple of days? The Ostabell County Medical Society meets at Hyannis tomorrow and I had promised myself to take it in this year. But I don't want to leave you, if you need me."

Ellery insisted that he did not need anyone, was getting along finely, and would not hear of his friend's missing the medical society's meeting. So the physician went. John Ellery did not feel cheerful that afternoon. The tired feeling he had spoken of so lightly was worse than he had described it, and he was despondent, for no particular reason. That night he slept miserably and awoke with a chill to find a cold, pouring rain beating against the windows of the shanty.

He lay down on his bed and tried to sleep, but though he dozed a bit, woke always with a start and either a chill or fever fit. His head began to ache violently. And then, in the loneliness and misery, fear began to take hold of him.

Night came. The rain had ceased and stars were shining clear. Inside the shanty the minister tossed on the bed, or staggered back and forth about the two rooms. He wondered what the time might be; then he did not care. He was alone. The smallpox had him in its grip. Why didn't some one come? Where was Mrs. Coffin? And Grace? She was somewhere near him—Parker had said so—and he must see her before he died. He called her name over and over again.

The wind felt cold on his forehead. He stumbled amidst the beach grass. What was this thing across his path? A rope, apparently, but why should there be ropes in that house? There had never been any before. He climbed over it and it was a climb of hundreds of feet and the height made him giddy. That was a house, another house, not the one he had been living in. And there were lights all about. Perhaps one of them was the light at the parsonage. And a big bell was booming. That was his church bell and he would be late for the meeting.

Some one was speaking to him. He knew the voice. He had known it all ways and would know it forever. It was the voice he wanted to hear. "Grace!" he called. "Grace! I want you. Don't go! Don't go! Grace! oh, my dear! don't go!"

Then the voice had gone. No, it had not gone. It was still there and he heard it speaking to him, begging him to listen, pleading with him to go somewhere, go back, back to something or other. And there was an arm about his waist and some one was leading him, helping him. He broke down and cried childishly and some one cried with him.

Early the next morning, just as day was breaking, a buggy, the horse which drew it galloping, rocked and bumped down the lighthouse lane. Dr. Parker, his brows together and his lips set with anxiety, was driving. He had been roused from sleep in the hotel at Hyannis by a boy with a telegram. "Come quick," it read. "Mr.

Ellery sick." The sender was Noah Ellis, the light keeper. At the ropes, early as it was, he found a small group waiting and gazing at the shanty. The lightkeeper was there and two or three other men. They were talking earnestly.

"How is he, Noah?" demanded the doctor, jumping to the ground.

"I don't know, doc," replied Ellis. "I ain't heard since last night when I telegraphed you."

"The devil!" Dr. Parker swore impatiently. "Who is with him then? You haven't left him alone, have you?"

"No-o," Noah hesitated once more. "No-o, he ain't alone. She's there."

"She? Who? Keziah Coffin?"

"I don't callate Keziah's heard it yet. We was waitin' for you 'fore we said much to anybody. But she's there—the one that found him. You see, he was out of his head and wanderin' up the lane 'most to the main road and she'd been callin' on Keziah and when she came away from the parsonage she heard him hollerin' and goin' on and—"

"Who did?"

"Why?"—the lightkeeper glanced at his companions—"why, doc, 'twas Grace Van Horne. And she fetched him back to the shanty and then come and got me to telegraph you."

But Parker did not wait to hear the rest. He ran at full speed to the door of the shanty. Grace herself opened it.

"How is he?" demanded the doctor.

"I think he seems a little easier; at any rate, he's not delirious. He's in there. Oh, I'm so thankful you've come."

"Is that the doctor?" called Ellery weakly from the next room. "Is it?"

"Yes," replied Parker, throwing off his coat and hat. "Coming, Mr. Ellery."

"For God's sake, doctor, send her away. Don't let her stay. Make her go! I've got the smallpox and if she stays she will die. Don't you understand? she must go."

"Hush, John," said Grace soothingly. "Hush, dear."

Dr. Parker stopped short and looked at her. However, he waited no longer, but hurried in to his new patient.

WOMEN IN THE CAMPAIGN

Three Parties Now in the Ring With Female Aids.

New York, Aug. 16.—With the appointment of Miss Helen Boswell and Miss Mabel Boardman to responsible positions in the management of the Republican national campaign this fall, the last of the three important political parties has recognized the value of women as vote getters.

From now on the three parties—Republican, Democratic and Progressive—will compete in efforts to interest women to get out and work hard for their respective candidates.

The women already have been organized to help along the Wilson campaign. The Woman's National Wilson and Marshall organization has been hard at work for the past week at its headquarters. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman and founder of the organization, is at her desk there every day.

The bull moose party has gone further than either of the other two parties in giving women the chance to do active campaign work. This party strongly urges the granting of woman's suffrage, and women have been elected to the national and state committees. Miss Alice Carpenter and Miss Frances A. Kellor are in charge of the bull moose campaign bureau, and they have a corps of assistants. Just what the status of the women is to be in the bull moose party was set forth in a telegram which Colonel Roosevelt sent to Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, who seconded the colonel's nomination and who is one of his chief workers in the campaign.
